

6516209647.txt

I feel that when television came about the radio stations felt threatened and perhaps at first they did. But as we know there is happy medium currently. So personally I think XM-radio should be allowed to broadcast locally oriented content, and isn't that what satellite television is doing by allowing local channels? Additionally, you would have to go after internet sites that are informing consumers of local content. Instead of fighting with each other try working together and perhaps the four types of media can learn something from each other and provide even better customer service in the future and isn't that the business you are in, customer service!!!
Michael L. Glover